

Luka Voncina is a health and development consultant. He was educated in Medicine (University of Zagreb in 2002) and in International Health Policy (MSc degree from the London School of Economics in 2005). His experience includes work in health systems management, health policy and financing, and health industry consulting. He has worked as a consultant in the Syrian Arab Republic, the Arab Republic of Egypt, Croatia, Serbia, Kosovo, Montenegro and Bosnia & Herzegovina. His client list includes UN agencies, governments and industry. Luka Voncina has authored over 20 publications, including papers in international peer reviewed journals, the Croatian HIT, several book chapters published by various international publishers, etc.