

Dušan Kidrič is currently working at the Institute of Macroeconomic Analysis and Development. His key qualifications are social analysis and development, public financing, social and voluntary pension insurance and social security. He is author of many articles and papers and contributed to the publication "Pension Reform in Southeast Europe: Linking to Labor and Financial Market Reforms." He is a member of the EU (Economic Policy Committee) Working Group on Ageing Population and Sustainability. In the period from 2000 to 2005 he used to be Adviser for the supplementary pension and health insurance at Insurance Supervision Agency of Slovenia. His responsibilities include regulation of complementary insurance in the field of pension and health. He participated in several conferences and seminars on pension and health issues.

He has BA in economics from the Faculty of Economics, University of Ljubljana.